

This is a prototype of how we want the flow of our focus-bot to go. We have discussed adding in the requirements for the different things that the bot can do later on, so that we know what we need to work on. First a screen with “How Can Focus bot help today?” pops up with a few options and then the user can pick how they want to focus. Then we will move into that page and get more information from the user themselves so that we can help them with the task they’re trying to complete.
